

Doctoral Scholarship Opportunity

in the Centre for Arts and Social Transformation

A one-time doctoral scholarship for a high achieving international or domestic student enrolled in doctoral study and undertaking research related to the possibilities of the arts for social transformation.

ABOUT THE SCHOLARSHIP

- A one-time scholarship valued up to $28,800 p.a. plus compulsory fees and international health insurance.
- Available to domestic students and domestic fee-paying international students.
- Application closing date: 31 May 2022
- Acceptance into doctoral programme required by 31 October 2022 or earlier

Note: Given the uncertain Covid-19 situation, international applicants will need to qualify under applicable requirements related to travel.*

The successful applicant will undertake a PhD's thesis in the Centre for Arts and Social Transformation, Faculty of Education and Social Work that aims to make a positive contribution towards the strategic research goals of the Centre, supervised by the Centre Director – Professor Peter O'Connor.

An ideal research focus might include the application of the arts to major social issues including homelessness, post disaster response, mental health and wellbeing, and the poverty of creativity in schooling; or the ethical, political and pedagogical tensions in the relationship between the arts and social transformation.
