

Amanuensis Exams for Students:

What is an amanuensis?

An amanuensis, also called a reader/writer or a scribe, is someone who writes out answers for a student during an exam. If you have an amanuensis, you will dictate (speak) your answers and the amanuensis (writer) will transcribe (write down) the answers for you.

Your amanuensis writer:

- CAN ask you to slow down or repeat a phrase or word.
- CAN ask you to spell some technical terms, names or words (but should not need to ask common words). They may ask you to spell more or all words for a language paper other than English. The writer will not be fluent in any language other than English.
- WILL be familiar with your subject area enough so that they understand how to write out required graphs, formulas and some discipline specific spellings.
- WILL be willing to go back over the script with you to check through the spelling and phrasing and make any changes you need – as long as you have time left as part of the exam. You can make small adjustments at this time.
- SHOULD write on every second line, unless asked not to, to allow you to make any changes needed.
- CAN NOT help you with the meaning of any words or questions or otherwise give you an advantage over other students sitting alone.
- CAN NOT write/draw when an independent command of the skill is being assessed.

How does it work:

Before the exam:

If you have never had an amanuensis before you may want to consider talking to Inclusive Learning who may be able to guide you and help you prepare for your amanuensis exam. Contact Inclusive Learning by email: inclusivelearning@auckland.ac.nz

All amanuensis exams include 20 minutes extra time per hour so a 2 hour exam becomes a 2 hour 40 minute exam or a 3 hour exam becomes a 4 hour exam. This extra time is added on at the end of the exam. If your exam is held on campus, you will receive a txt at the same time as every other student 24 hours prior to your exam advising you of the location.

During the exam:

During the exam you will let the supervisor know when you would like them to start writing and what question you are answering if needed. You will then speak your answers to the supervisor who will copy down what you say. Remember to let them know if you want any of the following things:

- New paragraphs, skipped lines, bulleted lists, underlined sections or other formatting.
- Specific spellings or easily misheard words such as there vs. their or affect vs. effect, colour with a 'u' or any other points that you think may be unclear when spoken.
- Titles or capitalised words.

You can (normally) only write on the exam script if you are drawing a graph or writing out a complex formula. Remember that you can have an extra script book to make notes but that these will not be marked.

Questions?

Contact Assessment Services by email: special exams@auckland.ac.nz