Student association	At Tsinghua SEM, student organizations are in integral part of the education experience. Each year students who join student association have an opportunity to play a leadership role, develop new skills, and take on challenges within a supportive environment. There are two formal student associations in our school. The Student Union is the formal one for undergraduate student. The MBA Student Association is the formal one for MBA student. The mission of student associations is to strengthen the communication between domestic and international students. It also serves a communicative link among students, faculty, the school and various enterprises.
Student Clubs	The clubs at Tsinghua University and Tsinghua SEM are as varied and diverse as its students. They range from social and professional to recreational and cultural. About two weeks after each semester starts, there will be an exhibition of all the students' associations and societies calling for new members. Incoming exchange students could choose to join some students clubs during that period according to your interests. If you cannot find an organization that meets your current interests, you have the ability to form and officially register your own clubs. Student clubs are constantly emerging as students and interests change; typically there are over 20 active clubs each year at Tsinghua SEM. You can find more information about student clubs and student life from your SEM buddy and our SEM student union.
